THE CHRISTIAN GENTLEMAN.

He is above a mean thing. He cannot stoop to a mean fraud. He invades no secrets in the keeping of another. He betrays no secrets, confided to his own keeping, never struts in borrowed plumage, never takes selfish advantage of our mistakes. He never stabs in the dark.

He is not one thing to a man's face and another behind his back. If by accident he comes in possession of his neighbor's counsels, he passes upon them an act of instant oblivion.

He bears sealed packages without tampering with the wax. Papers not meant for his eye, whether they flutter at his window or lie open before him in unguarded exposure, are sacred to him. He invades no privacy of others. Bolts and bars, locks and keys, hedges and pickets, bonds and securities, notice to trespassers, are none of them for him.

He may be trusted alone, out of sight—near the thinnest partition—anywhere.

He buys no offices, he sells none, he entrigues for none. He would rather fail of his rights than to win them through dishonor. He will eat honest bread. He tramples on no sensitive feelings, insults no man, abuses no living being.

If he has rebuke for another he is straight forward, open and manly. In short, whatever he judges honorable, manly and straight forward he practices daily towards man.

AN IDEAL HOME.

We hear a great deal these times about the ideal happy home, and men are not scarce who expect all the requisites for a happy home to come from one side of the house.

A woman may do her level best to make life and home happy for her husband and children, but if she is treated as a slave, and only given her board and clothing in payment for her service as mother, wife, cook, laundress, nurse girl, chambermaid, and seamstress, is it any wonder that little or no happiness exists in that home? If a mother spoils her son waiting on him all the years of his childhood and boyhood, and make him think that a man should always be waited on by a woman of his household, is it strange that he expects a wife to do the same, and that, in all likelihood, she either wear out in a few years from such service or else becomes bitter or disheartened? We are often told that in every true and ideal marriage both husband and wife must learn to bear and forbear. In every home where happiness exists, there must be perfect trust, confidence and love between husband and wife. There are two kinds of sunshine in the world, and both quite necessary—the one which is caused by the sun's shining out door, and the other by shining in our hearts. It is the loving deeds, the cheery hopeful words and the kindly thoughtfulness that each member of the family shows toward the others that makes an ideal, happy home—a perfect heaven on earth.

BE A MAN.

Foolish spending is the father of poverty. Do not be ashamed of hard work. Work for the salaries or wages you can get, but work for half price rather than be idle. Be your own master, and do not let society or fashion swallow up your individuality—hat, coat and boots. Do not eat up or wear out all you earn. Compel your self-h body to spare something for profits saved. Be stingy to your own appetite, but merciful to others' necessities. Help others, and ask no help for yourself. See that you are proud. Let your pride be of the right kind. Be too proud to be lazy, too proud to give up without conquering every difficulty; too proud to wear a coat you cannot afford to buy; too proud to be in company that you cannot keep up with expenses; too proud to lie, or steal, or cheat; too proud to be stingy.

Do not drift. We are living in an intense age; despite the frivolity and gaiety everywhere in evidence, never was there before a time when life was regarded as such an earnest thing; never before was so much required of each individual. Are you doing your part?

Kansas City Stock Yards, Jan. 5, 1914.—All classes of cattle gained 10 to 25 cents last week, and the market showed a healthy tone through the week. Supply today at market points totals heavier than expectations, but the 13,000 head received here were disposed of at steady to strong prices, and trade was active. Some cow sales were strong, and stockers and feeders were also firm. A feature noticeable in the last week is that buyers pay more attention to quality and finish, and long fed cattle made more progress towards making a just return to feeders than was figured for them some weeks ago.

Tree planting season is now here, don't overlook the matter again this year, PLANT if it is only two or three trees about your house—The waste water will make them grow.
